

A SAILOR'S NEW YEAR

BY A QUAD.

(Copyright, 1892. All rights reserved.)

At 7 o'clock on the morning of Jan. 1, 1893, the British brig, Adventurer, from the Cape de Verde Islands to the river Orinoco, passed a small French bark at a distance of about half a mile. She had been in sight for a couple of hours, and her actions had created no little talk aboard the brig. When first sighted, she had altered her course by three or four points. In the course of 10 minutes she was heading as before. A bit later she was off again. It was as if her crew was divided as to her port of destination, and as the crafts near each other they were puzzled by the lubberly looks of things afloat. She was under short sail in a fair breeze, her yards were not properly braced, and her first idea was that she had sickness aboard, and was short handed. We shortened sail, expecting she would fly a signal of distress, but she kept her course and did not even return our salute. Our mate, Mr. Hobson, had the glass on her as we came opposite, and he hadn't had it to his face over 15 seconds when he turned to the captain, who had just come on deck, and exclaimed:

"Why, sir, there are three or four men on her decks wearing the uniforms of Cayenne convicts!"

The captain seized the glass for a look and speedily satisfied himself that such was the fact, and five minutes later the Adventurer had come about and was in chase of the bark. Let me explain to you that our brig was a government craft engaged in harbor and coast surveys and was armed with two guns on a side and a Long Tom mounted amidships. From the surveys made by this craft between the years 1855 and 1890 all the rivers and along the east coast of Brazil and the Amazon had been explored.

She carried a crew of about 100 men, and was up the river and the Amazon had been visited on several occasions by the vicious and native.

We had no sooner come about than there was great confusion on the decks of the bark. More sail was made on her, but in a long time, and it was plainly evident that she wanted to escape us. I heard Captain Johnson say to Mr. Hobson that she was certainly a French merchantman, and he believed she had been seized by the convicts at Cayenne. She was doubtless in charge of a sailor, but there were not enough sailors among them to do things in shipshape fashion.

Numbers of men started to go aloft, but stuck at the cross-trees, and such sails as were cast loose were not heaved home to do their best. We walked up to her hand over hand, and in half an hour were within 100 yards of her. Our captain was hailing to know what was wrong. The answer was plain enough without words. When we passed her only seven or eight men were on her decks. Now the ship swarmed with men, all but the deck of violence were in confusion.

It was useless for them to reply to the hail under such circumstances, and for a minute they were silent as they gazed at us. Then they suddenly found their voices, and the yell they uttered in chorus was enough to make the hair on the back of our necks stand up. The shouting of their fists in a defiant way, and it may have become clear to our captain that he had a desperate set of men to deal with.

Our brig was sheered in a bit closer and a demand made that the convicts surrender. They could plainly see that we were a strong crew and had mounted guns, but the demand was received with yells of derision. The leader of the gang, whom we had not before identified, now mounted the rail, and in broken English warned us to keep off or take the consequences. He boldly declared that, if we were "escaped convicts from the penal settlement referred to, and having got safely to sea they would fight to the death sooner than be retaken. He added that an English ship had no business to meddle in the matter, and though we carried guns he was not in the least afraid of us.

Every man of the 90, as I may tell you, had been transported for a serious crime, and nowhere else could one have got to.

WANTED TO KEEP OFF.

gathering a more villainous crowd. The worst of it, however, looked honest, and mild temperance compared to the fellow they had elected captain. He was a giant in stature, as dark as a Spaniard, and his face was that of a savage wild beast. We were to see that he could look into his eyes and catch his ferocious expression, and I think every man of us realized that he would have to be killed before the brig could be taken. The defiant attitude of the convicts seemed to put our captain in an embarrassing position, but after a moment's thought he called out to the fellow on the rail:

"You must have captured the brig to get away from Cayenne. What has become of the crew?"

"Dead—every one of them killed and thrown overboard!" shouted the fellow in answer.

"Do you mean to say you murdered captain, mate and all hands?"

"Yes, all the crew, but we've got the captain's wife and her sister aboard! Now, you've got the news, and you shoot off and go your own way! Let a French ship pursue us and retake us!"

We were compelled to widen the distance between us to prevent accident from the lubberly manner in which the brig was steered, but we reduced sail so as to keep abreast of her, and the captain and his officers decided for consultation. I don't know whether they questioned their right to interfere, or discussed the best method of recapturing the brig, but they were not absent over a quarter of an hour. When they came on deck, we got the order to load with solid shot, and in 10 minutes every man and gun was ready for action. One of the convicts was aloft with a glass and could plainly see every movement aboard us, and our captain, who was likewise posted up, reported that the French had armed themselves with rifles and revolvers and were erecting shields against the bulwarks. A solid shot was thrown from her bows as a summons to surrender, and as a warning of what was in store for her if she did not, but the rest of the gun was followed by a chorus of yells, and three or four bullets came whizzing over our heads. The brig widened the gap until out of rifle range, and the captain then said to the crew of Long Tom:

"I want to save the women if they are aboard, and though yonder rascals are a desperate lot, I don't want to sink them. I want to strike, but above the water line. A few shots may take the fight out of them."

The first shot passed between her fore and mainmast without touching anything, but the second smashed her bowsprit and killed two men. A third and fourth were fired, both of them breaking havoc aboard, and we were looking for some token of surrender, when the bark ported her helm and came bearing up on our quarter. We had the advantage, but she had been three or four points off the wind. The fellows were evidently determined to get near enough to use their rifles, but with their Long Tom they stood no show.

We gave the brig more sail, and after a couple of minutes she was abreast and sending solid shot aboard again. There was great confusion among the convicts, and we were hoping for a slight wind when the wretches brought the women on deck. We could see them verily without a glass, and their groans and cries as they came on deck were enough to make our hearts sick. The shouting of their fists in a defiant way, and it may have become clear to our captain that he had a desperate set of men to deal with.

Our brig was sheered in a bit closer and a demand made that the convicts surrender. They could plainly see that we were a strong crew and had mounted guns, but the demand was received with yells of derision. ## WASHINGTON LETTER.

Congress adjourned Thursday until Jan. 3. Chairman Wilson gave notice before adjournment that he would call upon Trist Bill the day following the re-opening of Congress. It is generally understood that the discussion of the new measure will be limited to about three weeks. But it will depend some what upon the action of the substitute committee having charge of the Internal Revenue proposition. The necessary revenue will be raised on the lines indicated in Secretary Caldwell's report.

The Hawaiian question was again the subject of a sharp partisan wrangle in the House, Thursday, M. Bonville, of Maine, presented a new set of considerations resolutions, directed against Secretary Herbert, and insisted that they be considered. Mr. Bonville tactics for the past two days has made the Democratic leaders very wary, and when he offered his resolutions they were promptly objected to by a dozen Democratic members.

The resolutions direct the Secretary of the Navy to show by what authority authority Mr. Blount was given command over the naval forces at Honolulu.

The President and wife did not spend the holidays at Lakewood, N. J., as they expected, but will remain at the White House. The President, however, spending a few days at the week.

Assistant Attorney General Thomas, of the postoffice department, has decided as keepers of prisons and insane asylums have no lawful right to open and inspect letters addressed to such inmates without the consent of the same.

Mr. Lisle, the handsome young member of the House from the Tenth Kentucky district, is certainly a hustler. He got in late before the holiday season, but made the city count. He is working very hard for his district, and for a public building at Mt. Sterling. This is his first term in Congress, and he is showing his ability as a statesman and as a worker for his constituents, for whom he has hope and is doing valiant work.

A Wonder Worker.

Mr. Frank Huffman, a young man of Burlington, Ohio, states that he had been under the care of two prominent physicians, and used their treatment until he was not able to get around. They pronounced his case to be consumption and incurable. He was prepared to try Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds and at that time was not able to walk across the street without resting. He found, before he had used half of a dollar bottle that he was much better. He continued to use it and is to-day enjoying good health. If you have any throat, lung or chest trouble try it. We guarantee satisfaction. Trial bottles free at W. S. Lloyd's druggists.

The January number of The Forum contains besides Mr. Wells's article:

The Principle and method of the New Traffic Bill, by the Hon. Wm. L. Wilson, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee and author of the Bill;

"The Sectionalism: A Western Warning to the East," by Mr. Lindley M. Keasbey, of Colorado—an interesting and first-hand study of Western sentiment and its meaning;

"English Investors and American Currency Legislation," by W. Wetherill, of the Liverpool (Eng.) Daily Post—a well-known and well-informed English writer on American affairs, frankly pointing out how American securities and financial measures are regarded by the several classes of investors in England.

"After the Ball."

The "Montgomery Ball Club" gave an elegant entertainment at the Court-house here last Tuesday night, and it was pronounced by those who know, to have been the best of its kind ever held in the city. That towering old temple of justice, the Court-house, looked down in wonder at the merry throng which covered its floors. Never in its history, has it looked down on such a coterie of handsome young gentlemen and smiling, bright-eyed maidens. The Club deserves great credit for its excellent management of everything connected with the dance; everything moved as smoothly and nicely as could possibly be expected. There were no dead pauses, on—just it is useless to expatiate further on this subject, everyone knows the manner in which such entertainments are carried on by the M. B. C. There were about thirty couples in all present, just enough not to be crowded. There were quite a number of visitors here from a distance. The following is a list of the names we have been able to obtain: Misses Agnes Catlett, Jane Good, pasteur and Nora Peters of Owingsville; Misses Oula Fant and Loui Andrews, of Flemingsburg; Miss ——— Halton, of Cincinnati; Miss Mable White and Mable Russell, of Paris; Misses W. G. Ramsey, McChellan Exley, Oscar Brother and Jack Gatewood, of Owingsville; Messrs. C. P. Chennault and Arthur McDonald, of Cincinnati; Mr. G. B. Wall of Ashtand; Messrs. Henry Clay, George Clay, Sam Clay and Duncan Bell, of Paris; Mr. Calver Meng, of North Middletown; and Mr. Reid Patterson, of Lexington. The list of chaperones was composed of the following ladies: Mesdames Reid Rogers, Thomas Johnson, W. S. Lloyd J. O. Miller and Sophie Turner. The music was furnished by Henry Saxton's famous orchestra. An elegant supper was served at 12 o'clock, and at half past three the delightful entertainment broke up amid the strains of "After the Ball."

Hula & Scobee's Hominy and Grist mill, at Thomson Station, burned on Saturday night, together with about 200 hundred barrels of corn. The mill and contents were a total loss, which will reach at least $1500.

Now Alive and Well—Thanks to Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"I must praise Hood's Sarsaparilla, for it is wonderful medicine. I suffered 10 years with Neuralgia and Dyspepsia and fainting spells. Sometimes I would be almost stiff with cold prostration. I spent a great deal of money for medical attendance, but I did not get any benefit until my daughter told me about Hood's Sarsaparilla, and I began to take it. I weighed less than 100 lbs and was in perfect health. I owe all to Hood's Sarsaparilla."

A Picture of Misery Every one who saw me thought I could not live another month. But I began to improve at once after beginning with Hood's Sarsaparilla, and have gradually gained until I am now perfectly cured. I eat well, sleep well, and am in perfect health. I owe all to Hood's Sarsaparilla."

Restorers Wages.

The N. O. Nelson Manufacturing Company, one of the largest industrial establishments in St. Louis with branch factories in Mount City and LeClair, Ill., is conducted on the profit-sharing plan. The men have received dividends for the last ten years, and when the money stringency became severe last August they cheerfully accepted a cut of 25 per cent. in wages.

Tuesday a meeting of the directors was held, and Mr. Nelson announced that a dividend of 10 per cent. would be paid for the current year, and that the loss by cut in wages would be repaid in cash to each employee on January 17 next, and wages restored. The company employs 500 men. Revival of business is described as the cause of this action.

The new board of Collector Shelby, of the Lexington district, arrived this afternoon and was approved by Commissioner Miller. The gentlemen on the first board who kicked about the distribution of the patronage are now relieved from further responsibility.

Washington Cor. Courier-Journal, December 27.

Mr. P. S. Barber, the wealthiest man in Nelson county, Ky., died at Bardonia Tuesday night, leaving an estate valued at $200,000. He left very few friends. He did not take a penny with him.

have resulted in misery the world over. People who are well disposed and not bound by self-interest, are willing to accord credit wherever merited and due. Civilization is gradually bringing the human race up to this elevation, and in exact proportion is Dr. Penner's Kidney and Backache Cure coming to be recognized as the correct and standard remedy in all kidney, female, and blood diseases—being able to cure them readily. It is specific in all skin eruptions, erysipelas, scrofula, dyspepsia, headache, indigestion, listlessness, constipation, etc. Sold by dealers on guaranty for many years. Therefore don't cost much to try it. Take home a bottle to-day.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Stepstone.

Marion and Asa Evans have returned from the Cincinnati, Ohio Medical School to spend three weeks vacation with their mother.

Asa Maxey, of Ringo's Mill, is visiting his brothers and sisters at W. L. Maxey's.

R. Tibbs Maxey has gone to spend a week with relatives in Fleming county.

Miss Eliza Maxey's school closed in Fleming county last week and she will return home after she spends her Christmas holidays.

Egbert Coons' school closed at Cornish Friday last. He will begin a spring school the first Monday in February.

Ollie Coons' school closed on Salt Well, with quite a large crowd and a nice entertainment.

Granville Ratcliff and Edgar Moxley, of near Sharpburg, attended the entertainment at Salt Well school, also took an active part in it.

Miss Mary Maxey is visiting in Wyoming, and will return home near Sharpburg. She has been attending school here the past five months.

Charley Crooks, of Olympia, returned home after attending school here the past five months.

Children who are puny, pale, weak, or scrofulous, ought to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. That builds up both their flesh and their strength. For this and for purifying the blood, there's nothing in all medicines that can equal the "Discovery."

In recovering from "Crippe," or in convalescence from pneumonia, fever, or other wasting diseases, it speedily and sure invigorates and builds up the whole system. As an appetizing, restorative tonic, it sets at work all the processes of digestion and nutrition, rouses every organ into natural action, and brings back health and strength.

For all diseases caused by a torpid liver or impure blood. Dyspepsia, biliousness, scrofulous, skin and scalp diseases, even consumption (or lung-scrofula) in its earlier stages—the "Discovery" is the only guaranteed remedy.

If it doesn't benefit or cure, in every case, you have your money back.

His First Appearance.

Mr. Wilfrid Clarke, the well-known comedian, tells an amusing incident in connection with his first appearance on the stage. He had been a sailor in the "English Mercantile Marine," but in 1885, gave up that vocation and in two days after his arrival in London, from Egypt, became a member of his father's company, then playing at the Royal Strand Theatre. "Nicholas Nickleby" was the play, and young Wilfrid was given the part of a servant, which required his appearance in the first and third acts. After the act was over he went down to his dressing room and prepared to go home. Directly the voice of his father was heard shouting for "John." Young Clarke innocently walked up stairs and found that the third act was on, and the actors on the stage, evidently at a loss what to say next. He immediately began calling for "John," thinking, thereby, to aid his father in his search. On coming face to face with the elder Clarke, white with rage, he was surprised at him demanding: "What the d— are you doing here, sir?" "Why," answered Wilfrid, "I am calling John." "John," screamed the parent, "John, are you John?" "It is you they are calling for," "How should I know?" replied
